Langley Design were chosen by Galliford Try to provide a wide range of street furniture products for the Ridgeway School project in Reading. Langley Design completely revitalised the outdoor area using a combination of curved benches, cycle shelters and a large, bespoke external canopy. All the goods provided were manufactured in our workshop. Most of the products featured timber as the main material/structural component and this enables us to create a beautiful aesthetic which tied in beautifully with the landscape. It was great to see the client move away from the usual, full steel structures and using timber. The outdoor teaching canopy creates much more space for the school and this can be used in different ways throughout the year dependant on the Schools need. Langley were also tasked with installation of the project and with our in house site teams we installed on time and left Galliford Try very happy with the service provided.
